a living out of playing the bad Nazi in movies An owner of a movie studio in the 1930s throws out any audience member who misbehaves during a movie An office worker is distracted by a pretty woman washing the outside windows Other stories sound like wild fairy tales What if one superintelligent Siamese twin were conjoined with an idiot brother What if a witch's curse caused every third word uttered by a person to go unsaid What if a woman has terrifying dreams about a missing watch Some stories simply ponder the imponderable Why do certain memories persist or reappear Why do elderly people become set in their ways Why do people become blind to certain things Matthews explains in the book's preface that abruptions can reach down to dimensions of wonder and speculation that are commonly thought to be the proper domain of poetry These stories are a fitting coda for Matthew's career as a storyteller As deep and dark as these abruptions can become they are told with simple language flashes of humor and a sage's sense of wonder and irony Interactive Fiction M.L.
