Paraliterary Merve Emre, 2017-11-14 Emre s intellectual moves are many subtle and a pleasure to follow None of her bad readers could have written this very good book Los Angeles Review of Books Literature departments tend to be focused on turning out good readers attentive to nuance aware of history interested in literary texts as self contained works But the majority of readers are to use Merve Emre s tongue in cheek term bad readers They read fiction and poetry to be moved distracted instructed improved engaged as citizens How should we think about those readers and what should we make of the structures well outside the academy that generate them We should Emre argues think of such readers not as non literary but as paraliterary thriving outside literary institutions She traces this phenomenon to the postwar period when literature played a key role in the rise of American power At the same time as American universities were producing good readers by the hundreds many more thousands of bad readers were learning elsewhere to be disciplined public communicators whether in diplomatic and ambassadorial missions private and public cultural exchange programs multinational corporations or global activist groups As we grapple with literature's diminished role in the public sphere Paraliterary suggests a new way to think about literature its audience and its potential one that looks at the civic institutions that have long engaged readers ignored by the academy Paraliterary does for reading what The Program Era did for writing profoundly upend what we thought we knew about how institutions other than the university have shaped our culture and our engagement with it Deborah Nelson University of Chicago
