

The Digestive System

What is the digestive system?

The digestive system, or gastrointestinal tract, is a tract of organs that is responsible for digesting and absorbing nutrients from food. Food enters through the mouth, is broken down in the stomach, and then moves through the small intestine, where nutrients are absorbed. The remaining waste is then moved through the large intestine and expelled from the body through the rectum and anus.

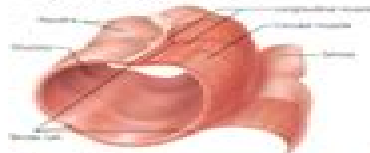

Liver, pancreas & gallbladder

After leaving the stomach, chyme moves into the duodenum, the first part of the small intestine, where it is mixed with bile secreted by the liver and pancreatic juice secreted by the pancreas. This area is a mixing region on the intestine where the duodenum opens into the descending large intestine. Bile from the liver, secreted into the duodenum, helps to break down fats in the gallbladder.

Layers of large intestine

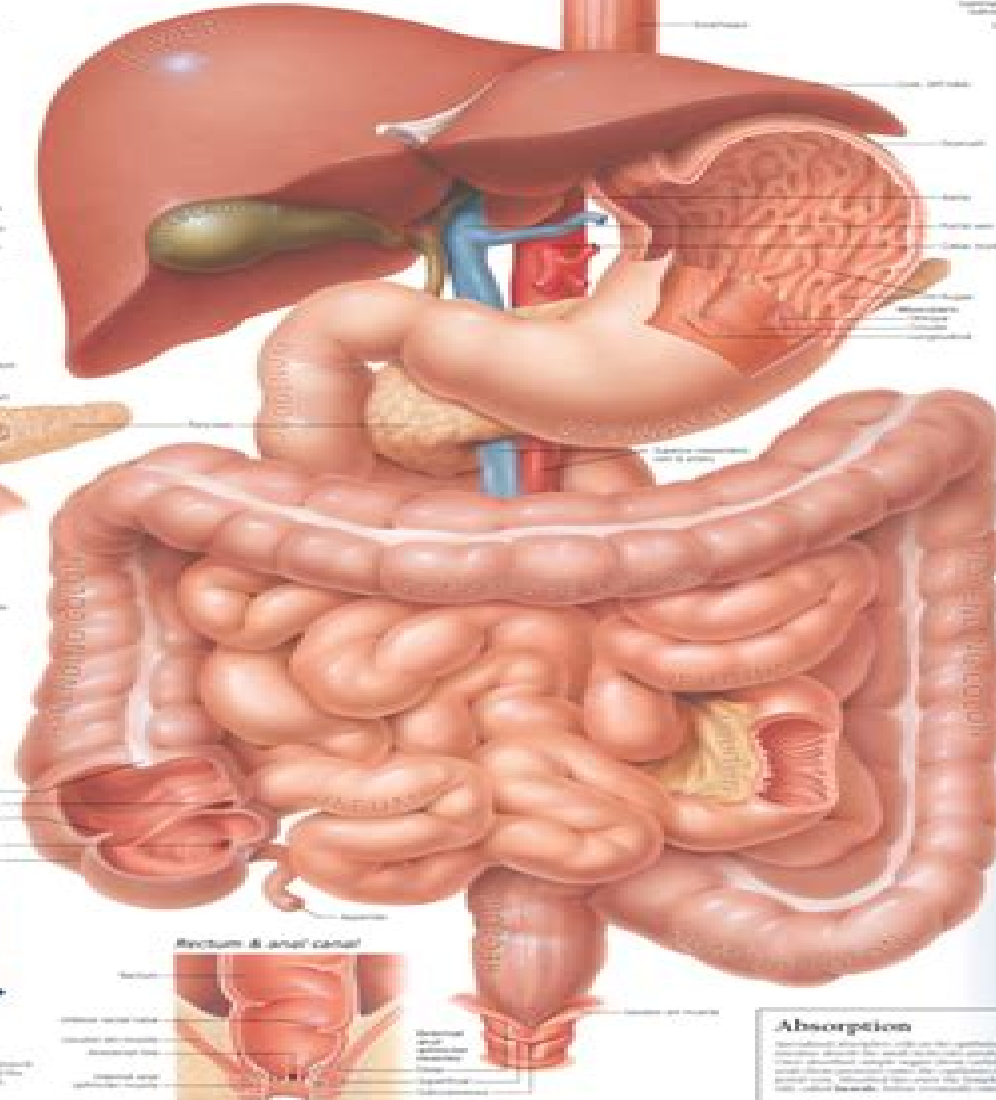

Large intestine

The large intestine consists of the cecum, the appendix, ascending colon, transverse colon, descending colon, sigmoid colon, and rectum. The large intestine is responsible for absorbing water and electrolytes from the remaining indigestible food matter, thereby forming feces.

Peristaltic action

Food material is pushed through the digestive system by a series of powerful muscular contractions called peristalsis. These contractions move the material forward and the food is then, when the stomach has relaxed.

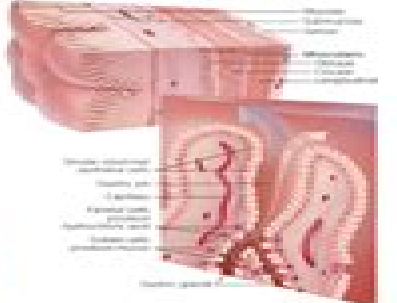

The mouth & salivary glands

Chewing the food breaks it into smaller pieces, making it easier to swallow. Saliva, secreted by the salivary glands, moistens the food and helps in the digestion of carbohydrates. Saliva also contains enzymes that help in the digestion of food. The salivary glands are located in the mouth and throat.

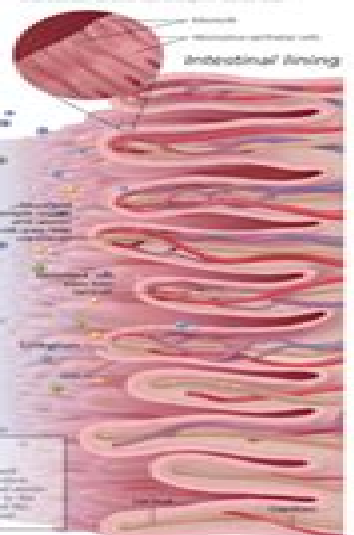

The stomach

The stomach is a large, muscular organ that is responsible for the digestion of food. It is located in the upper left part of the abdomen. The stomach has a thick, muscular wall that contracts to mix food with gastric juices, forming a semi-solid mass called chyme.

Small intestine

The small intestine is a long, coiled tube that is responsible for the digestion of food. It is located in the central part of the abdomen. The small intestine has a highly folded inner lining called villi, which increase the surface area for the absorption of nutrients.

Absorption

The process of absorption involves the movement of nutrients from the small intestine into the bloodstream. This process occurs through the villi, which are small, finger-like projections that increase the surface area for absorption. The nutrients are then transported to the liver and other parts of the body.
