

Experiment 10: Electrochemistry with a Standard Solution (from Basic Laboratory Experiments, Experiment 10, 45-50)

The purpose of this experiment is to determine the standard reduction potential for several half-reactions. In this experiment, a half-cell is constructed using a metal electrode immersed in a solution of its ions. The standard reduction potential for this half-cell is determined by measuring the cell potential of a cell constructed from this half-cell and a standard hydrogen electrode. Other standard half-cells, such as the standard calomel electrode, are also used. The standard reduction potential for the half-cell is determined by measuring the cell potential of a cell constructed from this half-cell and a standard hydrogen electrode.

In this experiment, you will determine the standard reduction potential for several half-cells, which will be used to determine the standard reduction potential for the half-cell.

Objectives:

1. to determine the standard reduction potential for several half-cells
2. to determine the standard potential for the half-cell
