The Alaskan National Wildlife Refuge (ANWR) on Alaska's North Slope is frequently in the news because petroleum geologists estimate that there are billions of barrels of economically recoverable oil beneath the surface of its frozen tundra. According to a 1998 United States Geological Survey (USGS) estimate, ANWR could contain up to 10 billion barrels of technically recoverable oil. Oil company officials advocate opening the refuge to oil exploration and the subsequent development of its petroleum resources. Environmentalists argue that oil exploration and development will damage this fragile ecosystem and urge Congress to protect ANWR by designating it as a wilderness area. - CORRECT ANSWER-question 2

Indonesian Primates Sharon Gursky-Doyen, Jatna Supriatna, 2010-01-15 Indonesia possesses the second largest primate population in the world with over 33 different primate species. Although Brazil possesses more primate species, Indonesia outranks it in terms of its diversity of primates ranging from prosimians, slow lorises and tarsiers to a multitude of Old World Monkey species, macaques, langurs, proboscis monkeys to lesser apes, siamangs, gibbons and great apes, orangutans. The primates of Indonesia are distributed throughout the archipelago. Partly in response to the number of primates distributed throughout the Indonesian archipelago, Indonesia is classified as the home of two biodiversity hotspots, Wallacea and Sundaland. In order to be classified as a hotspot, an area must have a large proportion of endemic species coupled with a high degree of threat, including having lost more than 70% of its original habitat. Two areas within Indonesia meet these criteria. The tremendous diversity of primates in Indonesia in conjunction with the conservation issues facing the primates of this region created a need for this volume.
