Managerial Economics & Organizational Architecture James A. Brickley, Clifford Smith, Jerold L. Zimmerman, 2007 With two distinct objectives this text's approach to managerial economics takes models from recent economics research and applies the research to the internal structure of a firm After teaching basic applied economics the authors look inside the firm and apply this analysis to management decision making Authors Brickley Smith and Zimmerman contend that organizational architecture consists of three aspects of corporate organization the assignment of decision rights within the company methods of rewarding individuals the structure of systems to evaluate the performance of both individuals and business units These three components can be likened to a stool with three legs If one of the legs is shorter the stool is out of balance These three elements must be in balance in the organization as well

Are Skills the Answer? Colin Crouch, David Finegold, Mari Sako, 2001 This study of vocational education in advanced industrial countries contributes to two different areas of debate The first is the study of the diversity of institutional forms taken by modern capitalism and the difficulties currently surrounding the survival of that diversity Rather than analysing economic institutions and governance in general the authors specifically focus upon the key area of skill creation The second theme is that of vocational education and training in its own right While sharing the consensus that the advanced countries must secure competitive advantage in a global economy by developing highly skilled work forces the authors draw attention to certain awkward aspects of this approach that are often glossed over in general debate

- 1 The employment generating power of improvements in skill levels is limited employment policy cannot depend fully on education policies
- 2 While the acquisition of skills has become a major public need there is increasing dependence for their provision on individual firms with government action being restricted to residual care for the unemployed rather than contributing at the leading edge of advanced skills policy

Covering France Germany Italy Japan Sweden the UK and the USA this book provides a unique approach to education and training within the broader political and economic environment As such it will appeal to students teachers and practitioners concerned with vocational training human resource management industrial relations and the sociology of the economy
