

The Digestive System

What is the digestive system?

The digestive system, or gastrointestinal tract, is a tract of organs that is responsible for digesting and absorbing nutrients from food. Food enters through the mouth, is broken down in the stomach, and then moves through the small intestine, large intestine, and rectum to be eliminated from the body. The digestive system also includes accessory organs such as the salivary glands, liver, and pancreas.

Liver, pancreas & gallbladder

After leaving the stomach, chyme moves into the duodenum, the first part of the small intestine, where it is mixed with bile secreted by the liver and pancreatic juice secreted by the pancreas. This area is a mixing region on the intestine where the digestive system continues. The gallbladder stores bile secreted by the liver and releases it into the duodenum.

Layers of large intestine

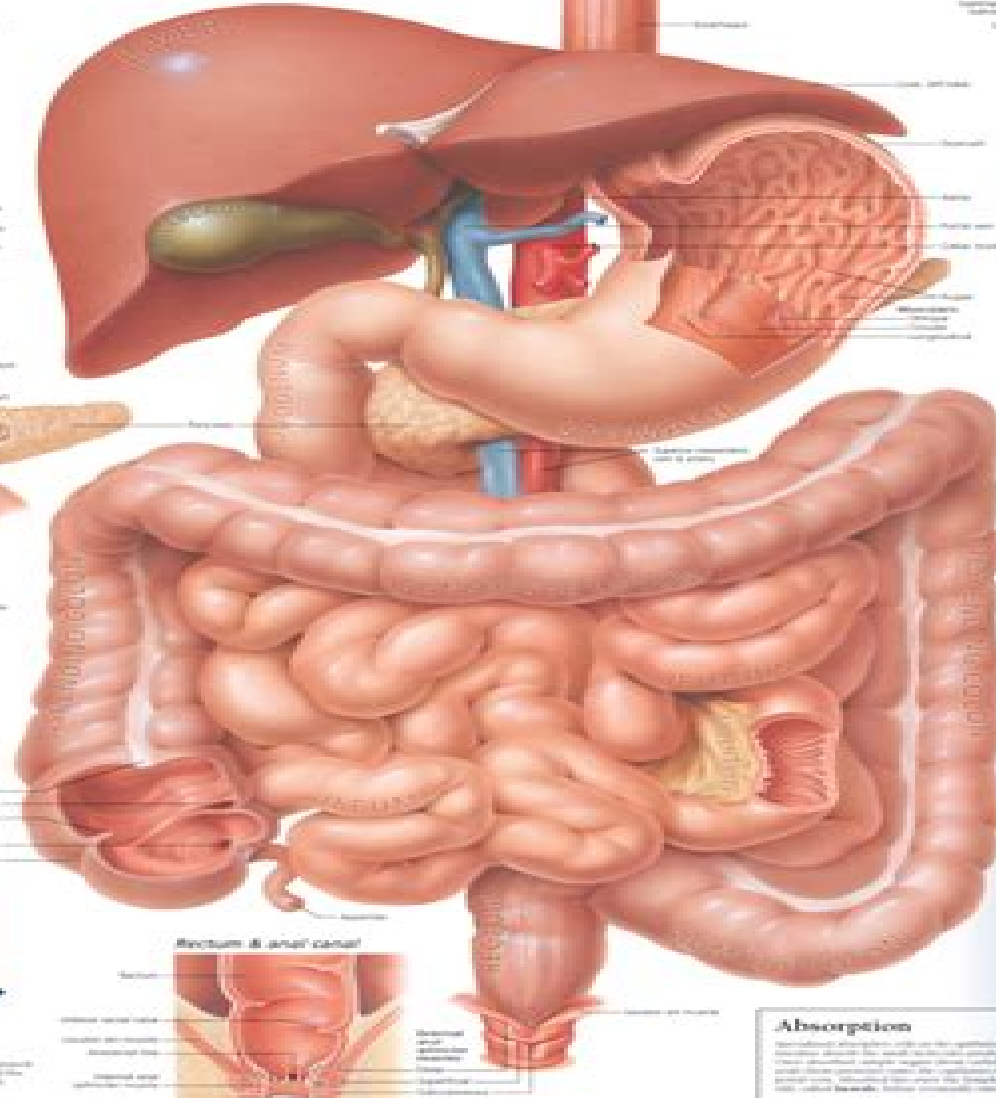

Large intestine

The large intestine consists of the cecum, the appendix, ascending colon, transverse colon, descending colon, sigmoid colon, and rectum. It is responsible for absorbing water and electrolytes from the undigested food and forming feces.

Peristaltic action

Food material is pushed through the digestive system by a series of powerful muscular contractions called peristalsis. These contractions move the material forward and the wave which, when it moves, the material is pushed forward.

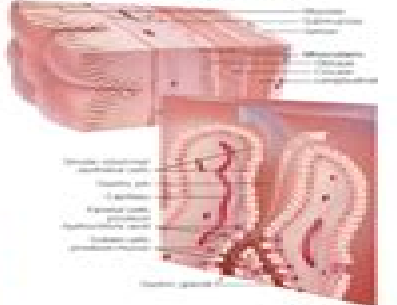

The mouth & salivary glands

Chewing the food breaks it into smaller pieces, making it easier to swallow. Saliva, secreted by the salivary glands, moistens the food and helps in the digestion of carbohydrates. It also contains enzymes that break down food into smaller pieces, making it easier to swallow. The salivary glands are located in the mouth and are responsible for producing saliva.

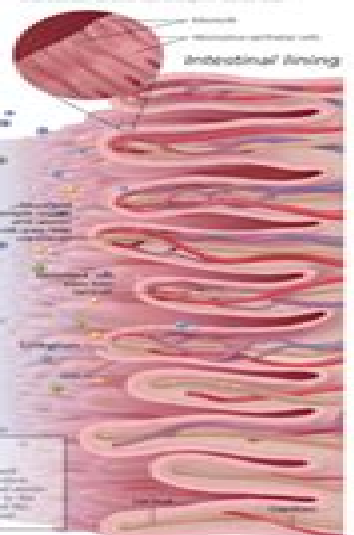

The stomach

The stomach is a large, muscular organ that is responsible for storing and mixing food with gastric juices. It is located in the upper left part of the abdomen. The stomach wall is composed of several layers, including the mucosa, submucosa, muscle, and serosa. The stomach is responsible for the initial digestion of food.

Small intestine

The small intestine is a long, coiled tube that is responsible for the majority of the digestion and absorption of nutrients. It is located in the central part of the abdomen. The small intestine is divided into three parts: the duodenum, jejunum, and ileum.

Absorption

The small intestine is responsible for the absorption of nutrients from the food. The nutrients are absorbed into the bloodstream and then transported to the rest of the body. The large intestine is responsible for the absorption of water and electrolytes from the undigested food.
