Prosun Bhattacharya, David Polya, Dragana Jovanovic, 2017-07-15

Arsenic in drinking water derived from groundwater is arguably the biggest environmental chemical human health risk known at the present time with well over 100 000 000 people around the world being exposed

Monitoring the hazard assessing exposure and health risks and implementing effective remediation are therefore key tasks for organisations and individuals with responsibilities related to the supply of safe clean drinking water

Best Practice Guide on the Control of Arsenic in Drinking Water covering aspects of hazard distribution exposure health impacts biomonitoring and remediation including social and economic issues is therefore a very timely contribution to disseminating useful knowledge in this area

The volume contains 10 short reviews of key aspects of this issue supplemented by a further 14 case studies each of which focusses on a particular area or technological or other practice and written by leading experts in the field

Detailed selective reference lists provide pointers to more detailed guidance on relevant practice

The volume includes coverage of

- arsenic hazard in groundwater and exposure routes to humans including case studies in USA SE Asia and UK
- health impacts arising from exposure to arsenic in drinking water and biomonitoring approaches
- developments in the nature of regulation of arsenic in drinking water
- sampling and monitoring of arsenic including novel methodologies
- v approaches to remediation particularly in the context of water safety planning and including case studies from the USA Italy Poland and Bangladesh and vi socio economic aspects of remediation including non market valuation methods and local community engagement Best Practice Guide on Metals Removal From Drinking Water By Treatment Mustafa Ersoz,Lisa Barrott,2012-05-31 Part of Metals and Related Substances in Drinking Water Set buy all five books together to save over 30% The EU Drinking Water Directive sets a range of standards for metals and related substances in drinking water many of which are concerned with health protection A number of these standards are very stringent and require compliance to be assessed at the point of use Because of the difficulties associated with monitoring historic practices in many countries have concentrated on the quality of water within the distribution network As a result the magnitude of problems with some metals and related substances in drinking water is not fully appreciated in all European countries and the extent and nature of corrective actions differ widely This Best Practice Guide on Metals Removal From Drinking Water By Treatment describes drinking water standards and regulations and explains the impact of a range of water treatment processes on metal levels in drinking water Its objectives are to provide a basis for assessing the extent of problems and to identify appropriate water treatment options The Guide provides a reasoned guide to selection of key water treatment processes Each chapter focuses on a specific water treatment process and has been written by experts in that particular process Best Practice Guide on Metals Removal From Drinking Water By Treatment provides practice based knowledge for water engineers and scientists in large and small water utilities regulatory agencies health agencies and local municipalities from cities through to small rural communities It also supports university level teaching in degree schemes that relate to water management This Guide is one of a series produced by the International Water Association s Specialist Group on Metals and Related Substances in Drinking Water The series is an up to date compilation of a range of scientific engineering regulatory and operational issues concerned with the control and removal of metals from drinking water
