Micronutrient policy process in Malawi Babu, Suresh Chandra, Haggblade, Steven, Mkandawire, Elizabeth, Nankhuni, Flora, Hendriks, Sheryl L., 2016-11-14 Micronutrient deficiencies are common across the developing world and have major effects on the health outcomes of its population Although this is well understood many countries find it difficult to bring about policy change in this regard This paper uses micronutrient policies designed and implemented in Malawi as a case study to shed light on the barriers and gaps faced by developing countries for similar programs and policies To understand the drivers of policy change this paper uses the kaleidoscope model to trace the policy processes of three major micronutrients iodine vitamin A and iron Using a select set of policy process tools as well as field interviews with key informants who were part of Malawi's micronutrient policy process the authors test a set of hypotheses on 16 variables that drive policy change in the micronutrient policy sphere Results indicate that much of the agenda setting for micronutrient policies and programs was triggered by external events that focused on the elimination of micronutrient deficiencies as part of the global development agenda These events include the International Conference on Nutrition the Millennium Development Goals and more recently Scaling up Nutrition The design of micronutrient policies and program interventions in Malawi was adopted by locally mandated ministries and institutions in collaboration with development partners who provided both financial and technical support at the design stage The adoption of micronutrient policies and intervention programs was driven primarily by external funding particularly through supplementation programs related to vitamin A and iron Adoption of fortification standards for vitamin A has been going on for more than a decade due to continuous resistance from the private sector which faces additional costs and needs greater technical expertise The biofortification method of micronutrient interventions for iron and vitamin A is externally driven and relatively new in Malawi Although this method is widely accepted by policy makers no concrete strategy has been developed for its design adoption and implementation Further supplementation and fortification programs continue to face implementation challenges due to poor physical infrastructure and monitoring systems However the national institutional architecture required for agenda setting design adoption implementation evaluation and review to address micronutrient deficiencies is in place in Malawi The system needs continued support from development partners for effective functioning at all levels The use of various tools for the policy change part of the kaleidoscope model indicate that policy change is a dynamic process over time changes in the nature and composition of the members of policy and institutional architecture can result in different policy outcomes The Malawi case study demonstrates two things First local leadership is crucial in keeping micronutrient deficiencies on the policy making agenda and second it matters where coordinating power is placed in the policy hierarchy This paper finds that even with policy champions adopted policies will face implementation challenges unless they are supported with adequate resources and are systematically followed through to final execution and delivery

Targeting hunger or votes? The political economy of humanitarian transfers in Malawi Duchoslav, Jan, Kenamu, Edwin, Thunde, Jack, 2022-10-07 Do electoral considerations play a role in the targeting of humanitarian transfers We analyze the targeting of direct cash and food transfers distributed in Malawi in response to an exceptionally poor harvest following a late and erratic rainy season of 2015 16 Combining household survey data on transfers with a remotely sensed measure of drought and with the results of the 2014 and 2019 parliamentary elections we show that transfers were disproportionately targeted at marginal constituencies Rather than distributing the transfers based solely on need or mobilizing its tribal base the government attempted to persuade swing voters to support its candidates in the next elections We find no evidence that this strategy was successful at increasing the vote of ruling party candidates in subsequent elections

Stahn,2015 The International Criminal Court has significantly grown in importance and impact over the decade of its existence This book assesses its impact providing a comprehensive overview of its practice It shows how the Court has contributed to major developments in international criminal law and identifies the ways in which it is in need of reform

Bridges and Barriers Eddie Williams,2014-06-03 Recent decades have seen sub Saharan Africa decline in both economic and human terms The rich North has responded with a barrage of well publicized initiatives from pop concerts to international commitments on debt relief aid trade and good governance Among the complex of factors necessary to sustain economic and human development education receives little media coverage although it is crucial However education must be effective This book argues that in Anglophone Africa education is not effective because of the use of English rather than children's first languages both as the medium of instruction and also as the language in which children are first taught to read. Research is presented from Malawi and Zambia countries with contrasting language policies using evidence from tests in English and African languages, small group discussions and classroom observation. The findings show that English medium policies in Africa do not give students any advantage in English over first language policies while the use of English discriminates against girls and rural children. The book concludes that much education in Africa is a barrier rather than a bridge to learning because of the prevailing language ideology which has resulted in massive over estimation of the value of English. While appropriate language policies alone will not solve education and development difficulties in Africa they do have a positive contribution to make. The evidence presented here suggests they are failing to make that contribution.

Museums, Heritage and International Development Paul Basu, Wayne Modest, 2014-10-03. While many claims are made regarding the power of cultural heritage as a driver and enabler of sustainable development, the relationship between museums, heritage and development has received little academic scrutiny. This book stages a critical conversation between the interdisciplinary fields of museum studies, heritage studies and development studies to explore this under researched sphere of development intervention. In an agenda setting introduction, the editors explore the seemingly oppositional temporalities and values represented by these past making and future making projects, arguing that these provide a framework for mutual critique. Contributors to the volume bring insights from a wide range of academic and practitioner perspectives on a series of international case studies which each raise challenging questions that reach beyond merely cultural concerns and fully engage with both the legacies of colonial power inequalities and the shifting geopolitical dynamics of contemporary international relations. Cultural heritage embodies different values and can be instrumentalized to serve different economic, social and political objectives within development contexts, but the past is also intrinsic to the present and is foundational to people's aspirations for the future. Museums, Heritage and International Development explores the problematics as well as potentials, the politics as well as possibilities in this fascinating nexus.
