Formal Specification and Verification of a Fault-masking and Transient-recovery Model for Digital Flight-control Systems John Rushby, 1991 The formal specification and mechanically checked verification for a model of fault masking and transient recovery among the replicated computers of digital flight control systems are presented The verification establishes subject to certain carefully stated assumptions that faults among the component computers are masked so that commands sent to the actuators are the same as those that would be sent by a single computer that suffers no failures

Design, Specification and Verification of Interactive Systems '96 Francois Bodart, 1996-10-07 Making systems easier to use implies an ever increasing complexity in managing communication between users and applications Indeed an increasing part of the application code is devoted to the user interface portion In order to manage this complexity it is important to have tools notations and methodologies which support the designer s work during the refinement process from specification to implementation Selected revised papers from the Eurographics workshop in Namur review the state of the art in this area comparing the different existing approaches to this field in order to identify the principle requirements and the most suitable notations and indicate the meaningful results which can be obtained from them
