

United States Government

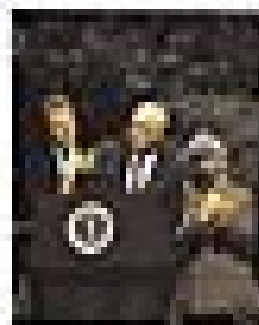

Structure of the Government

The United States is a federal republic. This means that the government is made up of many different parts, each with its own responsibilities. The three main branches of the government are the Executive, Legislative, and Judicial branches. Each branch has a specific role to play in the running of the country.

The Executive branch is headed by the President. The President is responsible for enforcing the laws of the country. The Legislative branch is made up of Congress, which is divided into the House of Representatives and the Senate. Congress is responsible for making the laws. The Judicial branch is headed by the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court is responsible for interpreting the laws and ensuring that they are fair and just.

Each branch of the government has its own powers and responsibilities. The Executive branch has the power to appoint and remove federal judges, to grant pardons, and to make treaties. The Legislative branch has the power to pass laws, to declare war, and to control the federal budget. The Judicial branch has the power to interpret the laws, to hear appeals, and to ensure that the laws are being followed.

President Obama and Vice President Biden

Major Governmental Branches

The Executive branch is the branch of the government that is responsible for enforcing the laws. It is headed by the President, who is elected by the people. The President has the power to appoint and remove federal judges, to grant pardons, and to make treaties. The Executive branch also includes the Vice President and the Cabinet.

The Legislative branch is the branch of the government that is responsible for making the laws. It is made up of the House of Representatives and the Senate. The House of Representatives is made up of 435 members, and the Senate is made up of 100 members. The Legislative branch has the power to pass laws, to declare war, and to control the federal budget.
