Cook,John C. Graser,2009 The Air Force has several options for sustaining weapon systems and components but has in recent years increasingly chosen contractor logistics support CLS over organic support Still questions remain about costs and efficiency even about whether CLS is the best option The authors explored these by reviewing the relevant government and DoD documents and data and by speaking with various knowledgeable individuals The authors noted that CLS contracts have often gone to original equipment manufacturers because lacking the technical data the Air Force could not choose a third party They also noted that contracts that guarantee large annual sums limit the Air Force s ability to adjust when its own funding changes and that the reasons underpinning these decisions are not always complete or consistent across the service Centralizing and standardizing data and the related management skills would help make them available across the Air Force More important to retain all its choices for logistics services throughout a system s life cycle the Air Force should acquire the technical data or data rights near the start of the acquisition process Defending Air Bases in an Age of Insurgency
