Mathematical Subjects Fiona Walls, 2009-08-10

Teaching and learning mathematics is a political act in which children teachers parents and policy makers are made visible as subjects As they learn about mathematics children are also learning about themselves who they are who they might become We can choose to listen or not to what children have to say about learning mathematics Such choices constitute us in relations of power Mathematical know how is widely regarded as essential not only to the life chances of individuals but also to the health of communities and the economic well being of nations With the globalisation of education in an increasingly market oriented world mathematics has received intensified attention in the first decade of the twenty first century with a shifting emphasis on utilitarian aspects of mathematics This is reflected in the reconceptualisation of mathematical competence as mathematical literacy loosely conceived as those ways of thinking reasoning and working mathematically that allow us to engage effectively in everyday situations in many occupations and the cut and thrust of world economies as active empowered and participatory citizens It is no surprise then that mathematics has become one of the most politically charged subjects in primary school curricula worldwide We are experiencing an unprecedented proliferation of regional and national strategies to establish benchmarks raise standards enhance achievement close gaps and leave no child behind in mathematics education Industries have sprung up around the design administration and monitoring of standardised assessment to measure and compare children s mathematical achievement against identified benchmarks and each other

Secondary Algebra Education: Revisiting Topics and Themes and Exploring the Unknown Paul Drijvers,2011-10-19 Nowadays algebra education is subject to worldwide scrutiny Different opinions on its goals approaches and achievements are at the heart of debates among teachers educators researchers and decision makers What should the teaching of algebra in secondary school mathematics look like Should it focus on procedural skills or on algebraic insight Should it stress practice or integrate technology Do we require formal proofs and notations or do informal representations suffice Is algebra in school an abstract subject or does it take its relevance from application in daily life contexts What should secondary school algebra education that prepares for higher education and professional practice in the twenty first century look like This book addresses these questions and aims to inform in service and future teachers mathematics educators and researchers on recent insights in the domain and on specific topics and themes such as the historical development of algebra the role of productive practice and algebra in science and engineering in particular The authors all affiliated with the Freudenthal Institute for Science and Mathematics Education in the Netherlands share a common philosophy which acts as a sometimes nearly invisible backbone for the overall view on algebra education the theory of realistic mathematics education From this point of departure different perspectives are chosen to describe the opportunities and pitfalls of today s and tomorrow s algebra education Inspiring examples and reflections illustrate current practice and explore the unknown future of algebra education to appropriately meet students needs
