

Karyotypes

Pre-Lab Discussion

Several human genetic disorders are caused by additional, missing, or damaged chromosomes. One way of studying genetic disorders is to observe the chromosomes themselves. In order to do this, cells from a person are grown in a laboratory. After the cells have reproduced a few times, they are treated with a chemical that stops cell division at the metaphase stage. During metaphase, the chromosomes are at the best length for identification.

The cells are treated further, stained, and then placed on glass slides. The chromosomes are observed under the microscope, where they are counted, checked for abnormalities, and photographed. The photograph is then enlarged, and the chromosomes are individually cut out. The chromosomes are identified and arranged in homologous pairs. Homologous chromosomes are identical, or matching, chromosomes. The arrangement of homologous pairs is called a karyotype. In this investigation, you will use a sketch of chromosomes to make a karyotype. You will also examine the karyotype to determine the presence of any genetic defects.

Part A: Analyzing a Karyotype

1. Observe the normal karyotype in Figure 1. Notice that the two sex chromosomes, pair numbers 23, do not look alike. They are different because this karyotype is of a male, and a male has an X and a Y chromosome.
2. Identify the centromere in each pair of chromosomes. The centromere is the area where each chromosome narrows.

Handbook of Autopsy Practice Jurgen Ludwig, 2002-07-18 The second edition of Handbook of Autopsy Practice appeared in 1979 under the title Current Methods of Autopsy Practice W B Saunders Company that edition was out of print in the early 1980s Now over 20 years later it appeared timely to thoroughly update the material in a third edition by adding what we have learned in the meantime and eliminating text that has become obsolete There is an acute need for a complete and readily accessible resource for autopsy work because few pathologists still specialize in autopsy practice and as a consequence expertise in autopsy technology and autopsy pathology has declined Our colleagues in the forensic field have remained the only large group of autopsy practitioners For most other pathologists the economic situation time constraints and the steadily decreasing autopsy rates have made a career in autopsy pathology unattractive This state of affairs is perpetuated by a lack of interest among many of our young colleagues partly because the teaching of autopsy pathology and autopsy techniques during most residencies is insufficient Numerous articles have been moaned this situation but the trend I fear is irreversible Still autopsies will be requested particularly in complex and difficult situations where the questions remaining after the death of the patient might challenge even experienced autopsy pathologists Under these circumstances this Handbook of Autopsy Practice should meet a particular need by providing the prosecutor with a source of information when it is most required in the autopsy room
