

The Digestive System

What is the digestive system?

The digestive system, or gastrointestinal tract, is a tract of organs that is responsible for digesting and absorbing nutrients from food. Food enters through the mouth, is broken down in the stomach, and then moves through the small intestine, where nutrients are absorbed. The digestive system also includes accessory organs that help in the process, such as the liver, pancreas, and gallbladder.

Liver, pancreas & gallbladder

After leaving the stomach, digested material enters the duodenum, the first part of the small intestine, where it is exposed to bile secreted by the liver. The liver is a large organ on the right side of the abdomen. It produces bile, which is stored in the gallbladder. Bile then moves through the common bile duct into the duodenum.

Layers of large intestine

Large intestine

The large intestine consists of the cecum, the colon, and the rectum. It is responsible for absorbing water and electrolytes from the remaining indigestible food matter. The large intestine is divided into three main parts: the cecum, the colon, and the rectum.

Peristaltic action

Food material is pushed through the digestive system by a series of waves of muscular contraction called peristalsis. These contractions move the material forward and the wave retreats, which is called the peristaltic action.

The mouth & salivary glands

Chewing the food breaks it into smaller pieces, making it easier to swallow. Saliva, secreted by the salivary glands, helps in the digestion of food. It contains the enzyme amylase, which breaks down starch into sugar. Saliva also helps in the lubrication of the food, making it easier to swallow.

The stomach

The stomach is a large organ that is responsible for the digestion of food. It is located in the upper left part of the abdomen. The stomach has a thick muscular wall that contracts to mix food with gastric juices. The stomach also has a valve called the pylorus, which controls the passage of food into the small intestine.

Small intestine

The small intestine is a long, coiled organ that is responsible for the digestion of food. It is located in the central part of the abdomen. The small intestine has a highly folded inner lining called villi, which increases the surface area for the absorption of nutrients. The small intestine is divided into three parts: the duodenum, the jejunum, and the ileum.

Absorption

The small intestine is responsible for the absorption of nutrients from the food. The villi in the small intestine increase the surface area for the absorption of nutrients. The nutrients are absorbed into the bloodstream and then transported to the rest of the body.
