Architecture

"We shape our buildings, and afterwards our buildings shape us." – Sir Winston Churchill, 28 October 1943

"Good lighting, windowless walls, low ceilings, and dull furniture are the hallmarks of many an effort, hospital, care center, or any place claiming the most efficient. But good-looking environments matter... good design improves our well-being." – From More-Than-Design Improves Our Wellbeing?

"Buildings are part of the solution. While accounting for nearly 40% of our country's carbon footprint, the building sector also serves as a low-cost, high-return transition strategy to reduce energy consumption and associated emissions, yet their potential remains largely untapped. McKinsey and Company estimates that increased efficiency would save the U.S. economy $1.90 billion per year, while reducing emissions by 3.1 gigatons a year. Moreover, programs dedicated to spur the renewal of old, inefficient houses and buildings will create jobs and save enormous money." – U.S. Green Building Council

It, Sir Winston Churchill asserts, our buildings shape us, drawing an argument about how we might shape our buildings to improve our well-being.

Progress

"Every day you may make progress. Every step may be fearful. The time will stretch out before you as ever-longlasting, ever-unending, ever-conquering paths. You know you will never get to the end of the journey. But this, as far from discouraging, only adds to the joy and glory of the climb." – Winston Churchill, "Painting as a Pastime"

Winston Churchill's description of the process of painting more aptly approaches a daunting task. Take a position on the value of attempting difficult tasks, particularly when there is a possibility that "you will never get to the end." Support your position with personal experiences, observations, readings, and history.

Power of Language

"The struggle for definition is inevitably the struggle for life itself. In the typical Western view men fight desperately for the possession of a goal that has been thrown to the ground: whatever reaches the horizon first stands and lives; the adversary is slain and dies. In eastern life, the struggle is not for goals but for words; whoever first defines the situation is the winner; his adversary, the victor." – Thomas Sowell

Does a person's ability to define a situation through effective rhetoric give that person the upper hand? In a well-written essay, argue for or against Sowell's position on the struggle for definition. Use readings, history, current events, or experience.

Information

"Information's perfect. You turn a few lines, a few all those mechanical adjustments at which the higher eyes are so proficient, and lo and behold you find your mind at all thought. And there you are receiving the influence of the perceived sense. You don't have to concentrate. You don't have to read. You don't have to remember. You don't use your brain because you don't need it. Your heart and liver and lungs continue to function normally. Apart from that, all is peace and quiet. You are in the state of heaven. And if some poor, under-educated person comes along and says you look like a fly on a tin of garbage, you have no mind. The probably hasn't got the price of a television set."

– Raymond Chandler

Consider our relationship with technology (cellulars, smartphones, computers, gaming systems, iPads, etc.). In many ways, technology has made our lives easier, but does it make our lives better? In a well-written essay, take a position on the extent to which technology has improved our lives.
