

AP Human Geography Notes

Introduction to Human Geography:

- Human geography is the study of the spatial patterns and relationships between people and their environment.
- It examines topics such as population, migration, cultural landscapes, economic activities, and urbanization.

Population and Migration:

- Population density refers to the number of people per unit area, while population distribution describes how people are spread across a given area.
- Key demographic indicators include birth rate, death rate, fertility rate, infant mortality rate, and life expectancy.
- Migration refers to the movement of people from one place to another, and it can be internal (within a country) or international (between countries).
- Push and pull factors influence migration decisions, such as economic opportunities, political stability, quality of life, and environmental conditions.

Cultural Patterns and Processes:

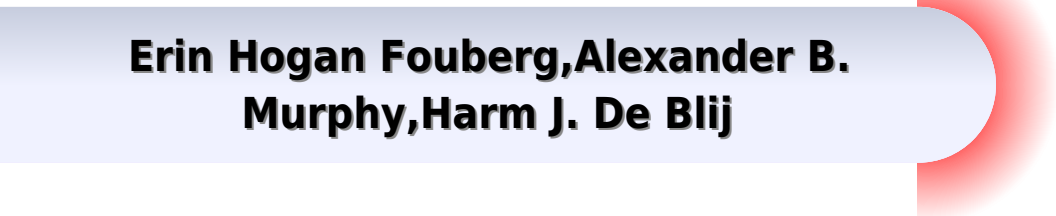

- Culture is the shared beliefs, customs, behaviors, and artifacts of a particular group of people.
- Cultural traits, such as language, religion, and food preferences, shape cultural landscapes and influence human activities.
- Cultural diffusion is the spread of cultural ideas, practices, and innovations from one society to another.
- Acculturation, assimilation, and multiculturalism are different processes that occur when cultures come into contact.

Political Organization of Space:

- Political geography focuses on the study of political systems, boundaries, and the organization of power within geographic space.
- Nation refers to a group of people who share a common culture and desire self-determination, while a state is a politically organized territory with a government.
- The nation-state is a political unit where the boundaries of a nation coincide with the boundaries of a state.
- Supranational organizations, such as the European Union (EU) and the
