

Investigative task chapter 7- smoking

According to the New England Journal of Medicine recently it appears that the number of cigarettes consumed per adult per year and the rate of decline along retirement gradually increase. From 1960-1970 the US. report for that year reported that average first decline is a gradual reduction in cigarette consumption and 10-15 years later, and it is suggested cigarette consumption has almost triple the number of cigarettes.

The association between cigarette consumption and CVD appears moderate but is positive under passive and active. The association between cigarette consumption per year and CVD mortality (active per 100,000 in 1981) appears positive at the beginning of the year and the association between cigarette consumption and CVD mortality (active per 100,000 in 1981) is not significant. Cigarette consumption under per year is 1.14, the active rate is 0.08. The slope for the month under the mortality (active) is 0.08.

When considering the total cigarette smoking rate in general along with active cigarette consumption, the relationship between cigarette consumption and CVD mortality (active) appears to be positive. The slope for the month under the mortality (active) is 0.08.
