In-text Citation

Format Guidelines and Examples

APA

Use parenthetical-style citations – (author last name, publication date) after cited material:

... (Chan, 2018).

... (World Health Organization, 2015).

Include page number(s) after direct quote/specific facts:

... (Miller, 2012, p. 55).

When using a signal phrase (naming the author in the sentence):

According to Chan (2018), ...

The World Health Organization (2015) reported

Miller (2012) states, "direct quote" (p. 55).

Citing an indirect source without signal phrase:

... (Roberts as cited in Chan, 2018)

Citing an indirect source with signal phrase:

Roberts (as cited in Chan, 2018) argued. ...

Author of original source

Author of source you read

AMA

Use a superscript number that corresponds to the order in which you first cited the source in your paper. The same superscript number stays with that source throughout the entire paper:

... summarized or paraphrased material.¹

The same fact from two sources.^{2,3}

Typically, page numbers are not required for direct quotes or facts for the in-text citation, but should be included in the References entry. If you do include page numbers within the paper:

Burkowski found that 50% responded well.^{1,para}

When including a signal phrase and author name within the sentence:

According to Chan,¹ ...

Several studies^{2,3} indicate ...

The World Health Organization⁴ reported ...

Citing an indirect source when using a signal phrase:

Cite the author of the original source, not the one where you found the information. The References entry will include both original and secondary source information.
