

The Effects of Smartphones on Attention in Classrooms

Section label

Attention Span

Smartphone Use

Method

In order to gain a better insight into the effects of smartphones on the attention span in classrooms, semi-structured interviews were conducted with 50 high school students.

Sampling Method

A non-probability sample was used to gather participants for this research. The driving factors behind this decision were cost and convenience.

Procedure

Potential participants were asked to complete a screening survey that consisted of demographic questions and basic questions about smartphone usage.

→ Participant Recruitment. Participants in this study were recruited through posts on relevant social media.

— Tools. The school's Facebook and Instagram accounts were used to target relevant participants. The reach of the posts was increased by paying a small advertising fee.

— Compensation. As an incentive, students who participated were granted an exemption from an essay assignment.

→ Participant Selection. Participants were selected based on their age, gender, and level of smartphone usage to acquire a representative sample of the population.

Sample Characteristics

The 50 selected participants were aged between 14 and 18, with an approximately equal number from each grade. With respect to gender, 22 participants identified as male, 25 participants as female and 3 participants as "other".

Interview Procedure

The interviews were conducted on school premises and lasted approximately one hour. A flexible framework of six questions was used to prompt open-ended discussion.
