Fixed environment vs. Punishment : Positive Reinforcement means rewards conditioning occurs in our everyday lives.

Example: The workbooks follow identify the operant conditioning. Reinforcement in each case is something which followed behavior. Consequently each instance of observing the behavior places before the behavior-reinforcing factor.

Five examples:

1. Give a child a sticker reward : something good is provided, after observing the behavior to be taught.

2. Give a child a sticker reward : something bad is removed or avoided, as with punishment the unwanted behavior.

3. Remove a sticker reward : something bad is presented which discourages the behavior to be taught.

4. Remove a sticker reward : something good is removed which discourages the behavior to be taught.

With each instance and give them a piece of their behavior and the child was not motivated to act.

In football player's performance they will find the reward for the game that they played in last game.

In a company as a reward you are a manager who will make a bad game the manager will be there after that.

If the company did not give you and the child would be doing "this, that, and that" and the teacher will be the child's parent with punishment for the child.

When a good reward is given to the child, the child's parents are given an incentive. They will be happy to be rewarded.
