

Scoring Notes

Introductory notes:

- Each point is earned independently.
- Accuracy: These rubrics require that students demonstrate historically defensible content knowledge. Given the timed nature of the exam, responses may contain errors that do not detract from their overall quality, as long as the historical content used to advance the argument is accurate.
- Clarity: Exam responses should be considered first drafts and thus may contain grammatical errors. Those errors will not be counted against a student unless they obscure the successful demonstration of the content knowledge, skills, and practices described below.

Examples of responses to (a) that would earn credit:

- Crane argues that:
 - The American Revolution was not radical because it didn't change women's status in society.
 - Gender roles for women remained unchanged after the American Revolution.
 - The ideals of the American Revolution were not applied to women.
- Zagarri argues that:
 - Women's social status and social influence improved after the American Revolution.
 - Women were newly able to participate in the country's politics.
 - Women were more visible in civic life/public sphere/society.

NOTE: Credited responses for (a) must explicitly address the substance of both excerpts.

Examples of responses to (b) that would earn credit:

- Women could not vote (except in New Jersey, which also eventually rescinded this right).
- Women were excluded from the rights stated for all men in the Declaration of Independence.
- Women could not participate in any of the political decision-making after the American Revolution.
- Abigail Adams asked her husband John Adams to make sure that men "remember the ladies," but women were not involved in political decision-making.
- The idea of republican motherhood gave women authority in the private sphere but kept them confined to the private sphere.
- Married women did not have any recognized legal or property rights separate from their husbands.
- Women were not allowed to fight in the Continental Army — adhering to gender roles.
