begins with the analysis of European dramatization of the Manchu Conquest of China and its subsequent fictional Christianization. Then the Jesuit plays with Chinese themes are discussed for the first time in literary history. Also analyzed is the reception of the Chinese Orphan motive in European literature which was the turning point in downgrading China and subsequently Montesquieu's impact on Albrecht von Haller's novel Usong is examined. Thereafter the study scrutinizes the contradictory positions of Herder and von Seckendorff or Goethe for that matter in Weimar. The book concludes with a concise analysis of the eschatological sinism of Hegel, Marx and Weber to indicate the development of the later centuries.
