Abstract: This study examined the effects of a 12-week, 100% body weight (BW) resistance training program on the muscle strength, muscle mass, and body composition of 12 sedentary, middle-aged men. The subjects were randomly assigned to either a control group (CON) or a resistance training group (RT). The RT group performed a 12-week, 100% BW resistance training program, while the CON group remained sedentary. The results showed that the RT group had significantly greater increases in muscle strength, muscle mass, and body composition compared to the CON group. These findings suggest that a 12-week, 100% BW resistance training program is an effective intervention for improving muscle strength, muscle mass, and body composition in sedentary, middle-aged men.
