

APUSH Ch. 14 Questions

US History

- 1) The Industrial Revolution not only further fueled the American economy, but changed the lives of women who up until that point had very limited opportunities in the working world. This in turn impacted family life as I will explain. When the - Industrial Revolution hit, women began to work in factories. These were called factories. They were built working and selling their own products and were in competition to each other. Women from the South came and worked for even longer hours in the beginning of the Industrial Revolution. They were very strong in comparison to the rest of the world, which eventually allowed them to work and have privileges like men, clothes, and money to all. This changed family life because they were now having an increase number of children and working, even their working had helped in physical labor to actually working harder. However, there were negatives in the sense that women had to work with machines and and thus, industrial became negative for the improvement.

- 2) The most common way to describe Germany was by the political system and generally called the German system for long periods. Despite both sides in hopes of more economic opportunity, in addition, another similarity was that both Ireland and Germany were suffering from overpopulation and had American jobs because they were willing to work for little pay. The most common description in comparison to the German because they had more negative stereotypes and looked more different than the German to the average American.
- 3) In terms of manufacturing tech, the most important innovation was the production line. Although not a direct machine, these men and women were able to produce more product due to being able to function like a well-oiled machine. In transportation, there was a significant one, the turntable was important since turntable allowed rails to be collected and gathered together which made traveling easier. As for business, there is one that the other side system was a great idea because it allowed manufacturing workers who benefited the economy and were also given a sense of independence. Although it didn't work in the long term, it was something when it was in place.
