The Oxford Handbook of the Cold War Richard H. The Cold War Louise Gerdes, 2003 This book includes an introductory essay on the Cold War and a collection of speeches by Winston Churchill Harry S Truman Mao Tse tung Nikita Khrushchev Dean Rusk John F Kennedy Albert Einstein Dwight D Eisenhower and many others

Deconstructing and Reconstructing the Cold War Alan P. Dobson, Shahin P. Malik, Graham Evans, 1999 The Cold War has been used all too often to set the parameters of what is important to explain in international affairs in the post war period The essays contained in this book provide thought provoking scholarship which helps us both to nuance our understanding of the Cold War and to realise that it should not be taken as an all embracing paradigm for the explanation of post war international relations

Which was the most effective analysis of the early cold war period, NSC-68 or NSC-162/2 Philipp Studt, 2006-04-08 Essay from the year 2005 in the subject Politics Region USA grade 72% Lancaster University course POL 320 American Foreign Policy language English abstract In the period after the end of World War II America struggled to find a sustainable coherent strategy to address the Soviet threat It is without doubt that both NSC 68 and NSC 162 2 were important documents of their time It is the aim of this essay to examine the circumstances of their creation their differences and ultimately assess which was a more coherent and effective analysis of the early Cold War Period placing particular emphasis on the perception of international order in the papers NSC 68 was produced in 1949 by a study group from the Departments of State and Defense under the leadership of Paul Nitze Its primary concern were the implications of the Soviet possession of the atomic bomb the uncovering of the spy ring around Fuchs that had infiltrated the Manhattan Project the recent creation of the German Democratic Republic and the fall of China to Communism The paper rested on the premise that the decisive struggle in foreign affairs was between the United States and Soviet Russia and that there could only be one winner One of the main arguments put forward was that the totalitarian nature of Soviet Russia allowed nothing but an expansionist foreign policy driven to follow this policy because it cannot tolerate the existence of free societies According to the paper the Soviets were motivated by a new fanatic faith antithetical to our own seeking to impose its absolute authority over the rest of the world Wolfe makes the point in The Rise and Fall of the Soviet Threat that NSC 68 denied that the Russians were capable of acting like other great powers unable to strike a balance between maximizing their power in some places and minimizing their losses in others instead expanding everywhere driven by their internal character 3 The policy of NSC 68 was in its own terms a policy of calculated and gradual coercion in order to check and roll back the Kremlin's drive
