Pathogens

A pathogen is a disease causing organism. Examples include bacteria, viruses, fungi and parasites.

Non-Specific Defence

Our body can defend itself against pathogens in a non specific way. This includes the following methods:

- (i) Hydrochloric Acid: Denatures the enzymes of most pathogens that enter the stomach.
- (ii) Epithelial Mucus: Epithelial layers inside the body produce mucus that pathogens stick to.
- (ii) The skin: Physical barrier that pathogens find it difficult to penetrate.

If a pathogen manages to make it through these defence mechanisms, it is unlikely to escape the phagocytes, a type of white blood cell that can undergo the pathogen destroying process known as phagocytosis. The following steps happen when a phagocyte comes into contact with a pathogen.

- (i) The phagocyte is attracted to the pathogen by chemoattractants.
(ii) The phagocyte binds to the pathogen.
(iii) The pathogen is engulfed by the phagocyte and is isolated in a phagosome.
(iv) Lysosomes within the phagocyte migrate towards the phagosome.
(v) The lysosomes release their lytic enzymes into the phagosome, where they digest the pathogen.
(vi) The breakdown products of the pathogen are released by exocytosis or are displayed on the surface of the phagocyte
- The diagram illustrates the process of phagocytosis within a cell. A bacterium is shown being engulfed by the cell membrane, forming a phagosome. A lysosome, containing digestive enzymes, moves toward the phagosome. The two fuse to form a phagolysosome, where the bacterium is broken down. The resulting products are then released from the cell via exocytosis.

Exam Question 1

Phagocytes and lysosomes are involved in destroying microorganisms. Describe how.
