

APUSH Ch. 14 Questions

US History

- 1) The Industrial Revolution not only further fueled the American economy, but changed the lives of women who up until that point had very limited opportunities in the working world. This in turn impacted family life as I will explain. When the - Industrial Revolution hit, women began to work in factories. These were called "sweatshops." They were hard working and without any compensation and were in competition to men. Women from the South came and worked for even cheaper but in the beginning of the Industrial Revolution, they were really strong in supporting the capitalism which eventually allowed them to work and have privileges like food, shelter, and laundry to all. This changed family life because they weren't even having an excessive number of children and supporting them from working and without an obvious reason to actually working because, thinking they were negative in the sense that women had left many with husbands and children, industrial became negative for the representation.

- 2) The Irish came over to America primarily due to the potato famine and poverty whereas the Germans came for long periods. Despite both came in hopes of more economic opportunity, in addition, another similarity was that both Ireland and Germany were suffering from overpopulation and both American jobs because they were willing to work for little pay. The Irish were more discriminated in comparison to the Germans because they had more negative stereotypes and looked more different than the Germans to the average American.
- 3) In terms of manufacturing tech, the most important innovation was the production line. Although not a direct machine, these men and women were able to produce more product due to being able to function like a well-oiled machine. In transportation, trains accompanied by the telegraph was important since telegraph allowed talk to be collected and supervised management which both boosted railroad economy. As for business, I want to say that the rail and capitalism was a great idea because it attracted manufacturing workers who boosted the economy and were also given a taste of independence. Although it didn't work in the long term, it was something when it was in place.
