| 2 (a) Relevant points include:• Speed is the magnitude of velocity (or speed is a scalar but acceleration [or velocity] is a vector).• In circular motion at constant speed the direction of motion changes continuously.• Therefore the velocity is changing.• Acceleration is the rate of change of velocity.                                                                                                                                     | 3                | Alternatively, this can be argued as follows:• speed is the magnitude of velocity (or speed is a scalar but acceleration [or velocity] is a vector)• force (or acceleration) acts towards the centre of the circle• force (or acceleration) is always perpendicular to the velocity (or has no component in the direction of the velocity)• so the force changes the direction of the velocity but not its magnitude |
