

Previous ANAO Recommendations Recommendation 1—Policies and guidelines The ANAO recommends that, to promote accuracy, consistency and understanding of AQIS cost-recovery, AQIS fully documents its cost-recovery policies and ensures that guidelines developed on budget systems and the budget process are current, for maximum effectiveness. AQIS Response: Agreed.	Progress of implementation Implemented AQIS has documented its cost-recovery policies and developed and disseminated updated charging guidelines.
Recommendation 2—Staffing costs The ANAO recommends that AQIS consider the cost-effectiveness of introducing a system to enable it to determine, and regularly report, the proportion of time spent by staff working on each program, and the different types of activities within programs. AQIS Response: Agreed.	Implemented AQIS has introduced an Activity Cost Assessment system to improve the accuracy of apportionment of staff to cost-recovered activities. The accuracy of Data from the Activity Cost Assessment system is being progressively used to align fees and charges with the costs of providing cost-recovery services. AQIS has also implemented improved procedures for allocating costs to the correct recoverable program. The ANAO considers that AQIS could better assure itself of the accuracy of staffing costs if it was to undertake systematic comparisons of the Activity Cost Assessment and personnel and human resources systems, at least at the end of each financial year.
Recommendation 3—Reporting to clients The ANAO recommends that, to improve transparency as part of its accountability obligations, AQIS include more comprehensive information in its annual Report to Clients about its cost-recovery program performance, including cumulative results in relation to under and over-recoveries. AQIS Response: Agreed.	Implemented AQIS now includes more comprehensive information about cost-recovery program performance in its Report to Clients.
Recommendation 4—Animal quarantine stations The ANAO recommends that, in order to achieve the objective of cost-recovery, AQIS reviews more regularly its fees in relation to the costs incurred for the Animal Quarantine Stations program. AQIS Response: Agreed.	Implemented AQIS conducted a number of reviews in relation to fees in the Post-entry Animal Quarantine Stations program. There were some limitations in these reviews, but the results have been sufficient to improve the program's outcomes. Once AQIS has implemented the revised cost-recovery model (described at recommendation 6), the program will have a framework for the systematic review of fees and charges.
Recommendation 5—Legal basis for fees and charges The ANAO recommends that AQIS review and resolve as necessary, the uncertainties concerning the basis for imposing the 'quarantine approved premises registration' impost under the Quarantine Act 1908 and the fish 'quantity charge' under the Export Control Act 1982. These matters should be kept under review on a regular basis. AQIS Response: Agreed.	Implemented AQIS reviewed the basis for both imposts and found no changes were required. The ANAO also found that the basis for the 'approved premises' impost was sound. The fish quantity charge was abolished in November 2001.
Recommendation 6—Minimising cost-recovery subsidisation The ANAO recommends that AQIS align fees charged to particular clients with the costs associated with servicing those clients where it is cost-effective to do so. Where this is not feasible, the reasons should be made transparent to relevant stakeholders and kept under review. AQIS Response: Disagreed, but subsequently agreed following the JCPAA hearing.	Implementation in progress AQIS has made substantial progress towards implementing a revised cost-recovery system. When fully implemented in early 2002, AQIS has the potential to improve AQIS' cost-recovery performance. The revised system will make appropriate information available for AQIS to demonstrate that fees and charges bear a reasonable relationship with the costs of the services rendered.
JCPAA recommendations Recommendation 2—Managing the risk of under and over-recovery The Committee recommends that AQIS improve risk management in its fee-setting activities with the aim of significantly reducing over-recoveries. AQIS Response: Agreed.	Progress of implementation Implemented AQIS has enhanced its procedures to reduce the risk of over-recoveries. All programs are now required to include strategies in their business plans that address risk management in fee and charge setting activities. However, a clearer articulation of these strategies at a more detailed level would assist AQIS to manage risk more in line with the JCPAA's recommendation. Monthly reporting to senior management on the program outcomes has been enhanced. Detailed discussions between program management and industry consultative committees identify factors that may influence revenue and cost, and this information is used to identify potential situations in which under or over-recoveries may arise. The strategies AQIS now has in place to reduce over-recoveries have generally been effective in improving program outcomes in percentage terms.
Recommendation 3—Minimising cost-recovery subsidisation The Committee recommends that AQIS implement the ANAO's Recommendation No.6 of Audit Report No.10, 2000-01. AQIS Response: Agreed.	(See detail for ANAO Recommendation 6 - above)
Recommendation 4—Electronic Export Documentation system (EXDOC) The Committee recommends that AQIS conduct a thorough cost-benefit analysis of the non-meat EXDOC system project. AQIS Response: Agreed.	Implemented A cost-benefit analysis has been completed as part of a post-implementation review of the EXDOC system. AQIS is now reviewing the cost attribution arrangements for EXDOC in light of the review's findings.
