Anna Matis, John Seidlitz

Language Learning Step By Step:

Memory, Psychology and Second Language Learning Mick Randall, 2007 This book explores the contributions that cognitive linguistics and psychology including neuropsychology have made to the understanding of the way that second languages are processed and learnt It examines areas of phonology word recognition and semantics examining bottom up decoding processes as compared with top down processes as they affect memory It also discusses second language learning from the acquisition learning and nativist connectionist perspectives These ideas are then related to the methods that are used to teach second languages primarily English in formal classroom situations This examination involves both mainstream communicative approaches and more traditional methods widely used to teach EFL throughout the world The book is intended to act both as a textbook for students who are studying second language teaching and as an exploration of issues for the interested teacher who would like to further extend their understanding of the cognitive processes underlying their teaching Mick Randall is currently Senior Lecturer in TESOL and Head of the Institute of Education at the British University in Dubai He has taught courses in second language learning and teaching applied linguistics and psychology in a number of different contexts He has a special interest in the cognitive processing of language and in the psycholinguistics of word recognition spelling and reading
