Exam 4: Monoclonal antibodies and the immune system
Antibody structure	Monoclonal antibody structure An antibody is a dimeric protein consisting of two heavy chain subunits and two light chain subunits. Key features: • Two identical antigen-binding sites (one on each heavy chain) • Two identical constant regions (one on each heavy chain) • Two identical variable regions (one on each light chain) • Two identical disulfide bonds (one between each heavy chain) The variable regions are responsible for the specificity of the antibody.	1. Structure of an antibody molecule 2. The structure of an antibody molecule is determined by the structure of the variable regions. 3. The structure of an antibody molecule is determined by the structure of the constant regions.
Antibody function	Antibody function Antibodies are produced by B cells in response to an antigen. They are used to neutralize pathogens and to mark them for destruction by other immune cells. Key features: • They are highly specific for their target antigen. • They are produced in large quantities. • They are able to cross the blood-brain barrier. • They are able to cross the placenta. The structure of an antibody molecule is determined by the structure of the variable regions.	4. The structure of an antibody molecule is determined by the structure of the variable regions. 5. The structure of an antibody molecule is determined by the structure of the constant regions.
