Science Reading Comprehension: Nuclear Decay and Radioactivity

Read the passage and answer the questions that follow. The passage discusses the process of nuclear decay and the formation of new nuclei. It also includes a diagram illustrating the process of alpha decay.

Understanding Nuclear Decay

Nuclear decay refers to the spontaneous transformation of a nucleus into another nucleus, releasing energy in the process. This process is governed by the laws of physics, and it is the only way for an unstable nucleus to become stable. There are three primary types of nuclear decay: alpha decay, beta decay, and gamma decay.

1. Alpha Decay

- In alpha decay, a nucleus emits an alpha particle, which consists of two protons and two neutrons.
- The emission of an alpha particle reduces the atomic number by two and the mass number by four.

2. Beta Decay

- Beta decay involves the transformation of a neutron into a proton. This process is associated with the emission of a beta particle, which is an electron.
- Beta decay is associated with the emission of beta particles, which are high-energy electrons or positrons.

3. Gamma Decay

- Gamma decay occurs when an excited nucleus releases energy in the form of gamma rays, which are high-energy electromagnetic waves.
- Gamma rays are emitted when a nucleus transitions from a higher energy state to a lower energy state.

Nuclear Reactions

Nuclear reactions involve the interaction between two nuclei, leading to the formation of new nuclei. These reactions are characterized by the conservation of mass and energy, and they can be either exothermic or endothermic.

4. Fusion Reactions

- Fusion reactions involve two light nuclei combining to form a heavier nucleus, releasing a significant amount of energy.
- Fusion is the process that powers the sun and other stars.

5. Fission Reactions

- Fission reactions, on the other hand, split a heavy nucleus into two or more lighter nuclei, accompanied by the release of energy.
