

Chris McCandless: Unraveling Personality Through MBTI

4 pages | 784 words

Chris McCandless, the central figure in Jon Krakauer's narrative, is a compelling character whose temperament aligns with introversion (I), sensing (S), and perceiving (P) in the Myers-Briggs Type Indicator (MBTI). This essay provides an in-depth exploration of McCandless's personality traits, delving into his preferences for extroversion/introversion, sensing/intuition, and thinking/feeling.

Introversion: A Journey into Solitude

In the dichotomy of extroversion and introversion, McCandless distinctly leans towards introversion. The MBTI Basics asserts that introverts find solace in solitary activities or small group settings, a trait vividly portrayed in McCandless's persona. His preference for solo travel is exemplified by his abandonment of his car to traverse on foot, relishing the freedom of isolation (Krakauer 28). An extrovert, seeking external stimuli for energy, would unlikely embark on such solitary journeys. McCandless's introversion signifies a need to disconnect from society, perhaps for rejuvenation or self-discovery.

Further analysis of McCandless's interactions with others reveals his introverted nature. His relationship with his car becomes symbolic of his preference for solitude. McCandless deliberately chose to undertake trips alone, showcasing a proclivity for doing things independently. This solitude extended beyond choice when he left his car, embracing the open road and foot travel, reinforcing the idea that his introversion was not merely a preference but a fundamental aspect of his character (Krakauer 28).

Sensing: Navigating Reality with Pragmatism

Turning to the sensing and intuition preferences, McCandless aligns with sensing. According to the MBTI Basics, sensing individuals prioritize tangible facts and recall essential details. McCandless's decision-making process is a testament to this preference. At the Morelos Dam and the Mexican border, McCandless, lacking identification, employs a pragmatic approach by navigating through the dam's open floodgates and the spillway below (Krakauer 34).

This incident highlights McCandless's inclination toward sensing. Rather than meticulously planning ahead, he learns through action, adapting on the go. Sensing individuals, as opposed to their intuitive counterparts, eschew detailed plans, preferring to embrace uncertainty. McCandless embodies this sensor's approach, navigating through challenges with a focus on the present moment rather than relying on preconceived plans.

Thinking: Rationality in Decision-Making

Examining the thinking and feeling preferences, McCandless exhibits a proclivity for thinking. Thinkers, as per the MBTI Basics, may overlook the emotional aspects of a situation. This inclination is evident in McCandless's interactions with people, exemplified by his communication with Burres. Despite sending her a postcard disclosing his location and expressing relief at her well-being, McCandless's decision to abruptly depart without meeting her in person reflects a rational, detached approach (Krakauer 43).

A feeling individual might have opted for a more emotionally connected departure, waiting for a face-to-face interaction before embarking on a new journey. McCandless's characterization as a "thinker" is accentuated by his disdain for the mundane, as seen in his departure from Bullhead, a town he perceived as filled with "plastic people."

Further evidence of McCandless's thinking preference is seen in how he handles situations with people. His description of the people around him as "plastic" suggests a lack of emotional connection, indicating a rational assessment of his social environment. The decision to leave a note instead of waiting for a visit demonstrates his prioritization of autonomy...

Argumentative Essay On Chris Mccandless:

Teaching and Learning Argumentative Writing in High School English Language Arts Classrooms George E. Newell, David Bloome, Alan Hirvela, 2015-06-05 Focused on the teaching and learning argumentative writing in grades 9-12, this important contribution to literacy education research and classroom practice offers a new perspective: a set of principled practices and case studies of excellent teaching. The case studies illustrate teaching and learning argumentative writing as the construction of knowledge and new understandings about experiences, ideas, and texts. Six themes key to teaching argumentative writing as a thoughtful, multi-leveled practice for deep learning and expression are presented: teaching and learning argumentative writing as social practice; teachers' epistemological beliefs about argumentative writing; variations in instructional chains; instructional conversations in support of argumentative writing; deep learning and appreciation of multiple perspectives; contextualized analysis of argumentative writing and the teaching and learning of argumentative writing and the construction of rationalities.

A Companion to the Biopic Deborah Cartmell, Ashley D. Polasek, 2020-01-15 The most comprehensive reference text of theoretical and historical discourse on the biopic film. The biopic, often viewed as the most reviled of all film genres, traces its origins to the early silent era over a century ago. Receiving little critical attention, biopics are regularly dismissed as superficial, formulaic, and disrespectful of history. Film critics, literary scholars, and historians tend to believe that biopics should be artistic yet accurate, true to life representations of their subjects. Moviegoing audiences, however, do not seem to hold similar views. Biopics continue to be popular, commercially viable films. Even the genre's most ardent detractors will admit that these films are often very watchable, particularly due to the performance of the lead actor. It is increasingly common for stars of biographical films to garner critical praise and awards, driving a growing interest in scholarship in the genre. A Companion to the Biopic is the first global and authoritative reference on the subject. Offering theoretical, historical, thematic, and performance-based approaches, this unique volume brings together the work of top scholars to discuss the coverage of the lives of authors, politicians, royalty, criminals, and pop stars through the biopic film. Chapters explore evolving attitudes and divergent perspectives on the genre, with topics such as the connections between biopics and literary melodramas, the influence financial concerns have on aesthetic, social, or moral principles, the merger of historical narratives with Hollywood biographies, stereotypes and criticisms of the biopic genre, and more. This volume provides a systematic, in-depth analysis of the biopic and considers how the choice of historical subject reflects contemporary issues. Places emphasis on films that portray race and gender issues. Explores the uneven boundaries of the genre by addressing what is and is not a biopic, as well as the ways in which films simultaneously embrace and defy historical authenticity. Examines the distinction between reality and the real in biographical films. Offers a chronological survey of biopics from the beginning of the 20th century. A Companion to the Biopic is a valuable resource for researchers, scholars, and students of history, film studies, and English literature, as well as those in disciplines that examine interpretations

Taking as their concern the difficulty of setting apart the inner and the outer worlds as well as the difficulty of preserving an image of the coherently boundaried subject the psychoanalytic frameworks of narcissism and melancholia provide the background coordinates for the volume's contributors to analyse contemporary subjectivities in new psychosocial contexts. This collection will be of great interest to all scholars and practitioners of psychoanalysis and the psychotherapies, social and cultural theory, gender and sexuality studies, politics and psychosocial studies. The New Humanities Reader Richard E. Miller, Kurt Spellmeyer, 2003. Designed to help students attain the analytical skills and big picture overview necessary to become informed citizens, the collection contains challenging and important readings from diverse fields that address critical issues in contemporary society. Ideas and research from wide-ranging sources provide opportunities for students to synthesize materials and come up with their own ideas and solutions. Students will be engaged by reading and rereading, analyzing and working with these selections because they present powerful ideas not simply because they are models of good writing style. Standard English Barry Spurr, Lloyd Cameron, 2000.
