

15. Figure 1-16 is a cross-section of a compact bone of the diaphysis of the humerus. What are the structures that form the cortex and the medullary canal within the osseous cortex?

Figure 1-16 is a drawing of a longitudinal section of the humerus. Within the humerus, there is a central, hollow shaft called the medullary canal. The outer layer of the humerus is called the cortex. The cortex is composed of compact bone and spongy bone. The medullary canal is the central cavity within the humerus. The medullary canal is filled with bone marrow. The medullary canal is surrounded by the endosteum. The endosteum is a thin layer of bone tissue that lines the medullary canal. The endosteum is composed of osteoblasts and osteocytes. The endosteum is responsible for the growth and repair of the bone. The endosteum is also responsible for the regulation of calcium levels in the blood. The endosteum is a vital part of the skeletal system. Without the endosteum, the bone would not be able to grow or repair itself. The endosteum is also responsible for the production of blood cells. The endosteum is a complex structure that plays a vital role in the skeletal system. It is a testament to the incredible strength and resilience of the human body.
