

Chapter 33: Invertebrates Study Guide

For this chapter, focus on evolutionary relationships. Memorize the taxonomy of invertebrates. For each phylum: know what makes it unique and know examples of organisms in that phylum. You'll see the word synapomorphy a lot. Remember, a synapomorphy is a feature shared by members of a group which is derived from a common ancestor. Remember that a synapomorphy can be lost in some members through evolution (like a notochord in echinoderms).

Ranaviruses and other viruses within the family Iridoviridae infect a wide range of ecologically and commercially important ectothermic vertebrates i.e. bony fish, amphibians and reptiles and invertebrates including agricultural and medical pests and cultured shrimp and crayfish and are responsible for considerable morbidity and mortality. Understanding the impact of these various agents on diverse host species requires the combined efforts of ecologists, veterinarians, pathologists, comparative immunologists and molecular virologists. Unfortunately, investigators involved in these studies often work in discipline specific silos that preclude interaction with others whose insights and approaches are required to comprehensively address problems related to ranavirus/iridovirus disease. Our intent here is to breakdown these silos and provide a forum where diverse researchers with a common interest in ranavirus/iridovirus biology can profitably interact. As a colleague once quipped: Three people make a genius. We are hoping to do something along those lines by presenting a collection of research articles dealing with issues of anti-viral immunity, identification of a potentially novel viral genus exemplified by erythrocytic necrosis virus, viral inhibition of innate immunity, identification of novel hosts for lymphocystivirus and invertebrate iridoviruses and modelling studies of ranavirus transmission. Collectively, these and others will exemplify the breadth of ongoing studies focused on this virus family.

Advances in Marine Environmental Protection: Challenges, Solutions and Perspectives Mehran Idris Khan, Yen-Chiang Chang, Wen-Hong Liu, 2025-04-29

Environments have no boundaries and no borders. Managing oceanic environments, particularly the threats and risks of pollution, should also consider the shared responsibility of all coastal states. Emerging issues for oceanic pollution governance include global changes like rising temperature, ocean acidification, but also disturbances of ecosystem functioning by plastic and pollution by other emerging contaminants, for example noise pollution and deep sea mining. These call for efficient and sustainable prevention and restoration strategies such as efficient urban and industrial sewage treatment plants, efficiently administered transnational marine protected areas and, among others, sustainable aquaculture, extensive small scale fisheries. Environmental protection warrants the development of interrelationships between marine sciences, relevant industries and ocean governance, developing internationally accepted rules and regulations for sustainable ocean management. This Research Topic will explore possible new domains of ocean governance and the marine environment from the interdisciplinary perspectives of the rule of law, including the international agreement on equal conventions: the Convention on Facilitation of International Maritime Traffic, the Convention on the International Regulation for Preventing Collisions at Sea and International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution from Ships (MARPOL).
