Modern Protective Structures Theodor Krauthammer, 2008-02-01 In today's world reasonably predictable military operations have been replaced by low intensity conflicts less predictable terrorist activities carried out by determined individuals or small groups that possess a wide range of backgrounds and capabilities Because of the threats posed by this evolving type of warfare civil engineers and emergency personnel face new challenges in designing facilities to protect lives and property and in conducting effective rescue operations and forensic investigations Addressing these needs Modern Protective Structures develops realistic guidelines for the analysis design assessment retrofit and research of protected facilities After introducing a comprehensive risk management approach the author provides a general background on explosive devices and their capabilities as well as explosive effects and the processes that generate them He then discusses the effects of conventional and nuclear explosions The book subsequently considers the significant design differences between conventional and nuclear loads and between existing design procedures and state of the art information from recent research It also summarizes existing blast resistant design approaches and describes the dynamic responses of structural systems to blasts shocks and impacts Additional coverage includes the behavior of specific structural connections the traditional concept of P I diagrams and progressive collapse The book concludes with a systematic and balanced protective design approach Tackling the analytical design assessment and hazard mitigation issues associated with short duration

Quinn,S. E. G. Lea,2010 Human adults appear different from other animals in their ability to form abstract mental representations that go beyond perceptual similarity In short they can conceptualize the world This apparent uniqueness leads to an immediate puzzle WHEN and HOW does this abstract system come into being To answer this question we need to explore the origins of adult concepts both developmentally and phylogenetically When does the developing child acquire the ability to use abstract concepts Does the transition occur around 2 years with the onset of symbolic representation and language Or is it independent of the emergence of language When in evolutionary history did an abstract representational system emerge Is there something unique about the human brain How would a computational system operating on the basis of perceptual associations develop into a system operating on the basis of abstract relations Is this ability present in other species but masked by their inability to verbalise abstractions Perhaps the very notion of concepts is empty and should be done away with altogether This book tackles the age old puzzle of what might be unique about human concepts Intuitively we have a sense that our thoughts are somehow different from those of animals and young children such as infants Yet if true this raises the question of where and how this uniqueness arises What are the factors that have played out during the life course of the individual and over the evolution of humans that have contributed to the emergence of this apparently unique ability This volume brings together a collection of world specialists who have grappled with these questions from different perspectives to try to resolve the issue It includes contributions from leading psychologists neuroscientists child and infant specialists and animal cognition specialists Taken together this story leads to the idea that there is no unique ingredient in the emergence of human concepts but rather a powerful and potentially unique mix of biological abilities and personal and social history that has led to where the human mind now stands A must read for students and researchers in the cognitive sciences
