

Ah Back Math: Answers Knowing All Angles

Highly skilled, but under-qualified, workers will have to retrain themselves, according to analysts, and employers must invest more in labor. It is not that educationally under-qualified workers are not available to get the jobs, but they do not have the training and experience. They are, however, being "re-trained" through on-the-job training, community colleges, and other non-traditional training programs and facilities as a secondary educational system.

For more information, please contact the National Transportation Safety Board at 800-875-5242 or visit our website at www.ntsb.gov. The NTSB is an independent federal agency that investigates transportation accidents and safety issues. It is not a law enforcement agency and does not assign blame. The NTSB's primary mission is to determine the causes of transportation accidents and to develop safety recommendations to prevent future accidents. The NTSB's investigations are conducted by a team of experts in the relevant mode of transportation. The NTSB's findings are published in a report that is made available to the public. The NTSB's recommendations are issued as safety recommendations, which are not binding on any agency. The NTSB's work is funded by the federal government and by private industry.
