Rewriting Early Chinese Texts Edward L. Shaughnessy, 2006-06-01 Rewriting Early Chinese Texts examines the problems of reconstituting and editing ancient manuscripts that will revise indeed rewrite Chinese history It is now generally recognized that the extensive archaeological discoveries made in China over the last three decades necessitate such a rewriting and will keep an army of scholars busy for years to come However this is by no means the first time China's historical record has needed rewriting In this book author Edward L. Shaughnessy explores the issues involved in editing manuscripts rewriting them both today and in the past The book begins with a discussion of the difficulties encountered by modern archaeologists and paleographers working with manuscripts discovered in ancient tombs The challenges are considerable these texts are usually written in archaic script on bamboo strips and are typically fragmentary and in disarray It is not surprising that their new editions often meet with criticism from other scholars Shaughnessy then moves back in time to consider efforts to reconstitute similar bamboo strip manuscripts found in the late third century in a tomb in Jixian Henan He shows that editors at the time encountered many of the same difficulties faced by modern archaeologists and paleographers and that the first editions produced by a court appointed team of editors quickly prompted criticism from other scholars of the time Shaughnessy concludes with a detailed study of the editing of one of these texts the Bamboo Annals Zhushu jinian arguably the most important manuscript ever discovered in China Showing how at least two different competing editions of this text were produced by different editors and how the differences between them led later scholars to regard the original edition the only one still extant as a forgery Shaughnessy argues for this text's place in the rewriting of early Chinese history

The Animal and the Daemon in Early China Roel Sterckx, 2012-02-01 Exploring the cultural perception of animals in early Chinese thought this careful reading of Warring States and Han dynasty writings analyzes how views of animals were linked to human self perception and investigates the role of the animal world in the conception of ideals of sagehood and socio political authority Roel Sterckx shows how perceptions of the animal world influenced early Chinese views of man's place among the living species and in the world at large He argues that the classic Chinese perception of the world did not insist on clear categorical or ontological boundaries between animals humans and other creatures such as ghosts and spirits Instead the animal realm was positioned as part of an organic whole and the mutual relationships among the living species both as natural and cultural creatures were characterized as contingent continuous and interdependent

The Ambivalence of Creation Michael J. Puett, 2002-08-01

As early as the Warring States period in China fourth through third centuries B C debates arose concerning how and under what circumstances new institutions could be formed and legitimated But the debates quickly encompassed more than just legitimation Larger issues came to the fore Can a sage innovate If so under what conditions Where did human culture originally come from Was it created by human sages Is it therefore an artificial fabrication or was it based in part on natural patterns Is it possible for new sages to emerge who could create something better This book studies these debates from the Warring States period to the early Han second century b c analyzing the texts in detail and tracing the historical consequences of the various positions that emerged It also examines the time s conflicting narratives about the origin of the state and how these narratives and ideas were manipulated for ideological purposes during the formation of the first empires While tracing debates over the question of innovation in early China the author engages such questions as the prevailing notions concerning artifice and creation This is of special importance because early China is often described as a civilization that assumed continuity between nature and culture and hence had no notion of culture as a fabrication no notion that the sages did anything other than imitate the natural world The author concludes that such views were not assumptions at all The ideas that human culture is merely part of the natural world and that true sages never created anything but instead replicated natural patterns arose at a certain moment then came to prominence only at the end of a lengthy debate
