The Shape of Actions Harry Collins,Martin Kusch,1999-01-05 What can humans do What can machines do How do humans delegate actions to machines In this book Harry Collins and Martin Kusch combine insights from sociology and philosophy to provide a novel answer to these increasingly important questions The authors begin by distinguishing between two basic types of intentional behavior which they call polymorphic actions and mimeomorphic actions Polymorphic actions such as writing a love letter are ones that community members expect to vary with social context Mimeomorphic actions such as swinging a golf club do not vary Although machines cannot act they can mimic mimeomorphic actions Mimeomorphic actions are thus the crucial link between what humans can do and what machines can do Following a presentation of their detailed categorization of actions the authors apply their approach to a broad range of human machine interactions and to learning Key examples include bicycle riding and the many varieties of writing machines They also show how their theory can be used to explain the operation of organizations such as restaurants and armies Finally they look at a historical case the technological development of the air pump applying their categorization of actions to the processes of mechanization and automation Automation they argue can occur only where what we want to bring about can be brought about through mimeomorphic action
