Toward Human-Level Artificial Intelligence Eitan Michael Azoff,2024-09-18 Is a computer simulation of a brain sufficient to make it intelligent Do you need consciousness to have intelligence Do you need to be alive to have consciousness This book has a dual purpose First it provides a multi disciplinary research survey across all branches of neuroscience and AI research that relate to this book's mission of bringing AI research closer to building a human level AI HLA system. It provides an encapsulation of key ideas and concepts and provides all the references for the reader to delve deeper. Much of the survey coverage is of recent pioneering research. Second, the final part of this book brings together key concepts from the survey and makes suggestions for building HLA. This book provides accessible explanations of numerous key concepts from neuroscience and artificial intelligence research including: The focus on visual processing and thinking and the possible role of brain lateralization toward visual thinking and intelligence. Diffuse decision making by ensembles of neurons. The inside out model to give HLA an inner life and the possible role for cognitive architecture implementing the scientific method through the plan-do-check-act cycle within that model. Learning to learn. A neuromodulation feature such as a machine equivalent of dopamine that reinforces learning. The embodied HLA machine, a neurorobot that interacts with the physical world as it learns. This book concludes by explaining the hypothesis that computer simulation is sufficient to take AI research further toward HLA and that the scientific method is our means to enable that progress. This book will be of great interest to a broad audience, particularly neuroscientists and AI researchers, investors in AI projects and lay readers looking for an accessible introduction to the intersection of neuroscience and artificial intelligence.
