Reflection-in-Motion Jaclyn Fiscus-Cannaday, 2025-05-23 Reflection in Motion considers how reflective practice is embedded in daily course happenings centering the experiences of students and teachers in Minority Serving Institutions to amplify underrepresented viewpoints about how reflection works in the writing classroom Jaclyn Fiscus Cannaday examines how its availability is subject to teacher student power dynamics the literacies welcomed or not in the class the past and present pedagogies that students are engaging with and attending to and the interactions among humans materials and emotions within the rhetorical context She adopts an intersectional feminist perspective for an inclusive view of how practitioners name identify and practice reflection in the everyday moments of writing classrooms Fiscus Cannaday invokes a Black feminist qualitative research method that Venus Evans Winters calls a mosaic When researchers collect both traditional and nontraditional texts to create a full view of students and teachers interviews at three institutions a Hispanic

Serving Institution a Historically Black College and University and an Asian American Native American Pacific Islander Serving Institution she finds that practitioners often build definitions from past experiences with reflection and then use those definitions as terministic screens to decide if an activity can be named identified and practiced as reflection These definitions hold different rhetorical effects reflection for introspection reflection for learning reflection for mindfulness and reflection for awareness Reflection is used for these different rhetorical effects but because classrooms so often focus on the Westernized view and its emphasis on growth reflection has the underused and undertheorized potential rhetorical effect of helping students investigate their identities and positionalities acknowledge deep rooted ideologies and consider new perspectives so they can better work across difference Reflection in Motion will inspire teachers and writing program administrators to listen to how students define and practice reflection and why thus making room for more capacious definitions of reflection and student centered practices of what reflection can do and be

The Course Reflection Project

Nicole Schonemann, Emily Metzgar, Andrew Libby, 2015-05-01 Service learning is entering a post initiatory phase At tertiary institutions of all types and sizes service learning programs are common and service learning requirements for graduation are growing in popularity Taken together alongside continued faculty interest in effective teaching these factors have raised the visibility and popularity of service learning Now the greater need in service learning is not to prove the need for or efficacy of service learning but to turn the focus squarely back on practice Following established best practice is not enough instructors also need to reflect on how this fits within the specific context and application of each unique course and service learning partnership While there are many excellent resources that detail best practice and showcase exemplary service learning courses faculty reflection and course revision often goes unmentioned In response to the lack of attention on the role of reflection and course revision we convened groups of faculty from a variety of disciplines to reflect deeply on their courses paying specific attention to obstacles and challenges These conversations were converted to articles for this edited collection each chapter representing the process of reflection and revision and serving as a guide to develop effective practice in varied curricular contexts This text contributes to the body of literature on service learning in a unique and practical manner Faculty teaching or interested in teaching service learning classes would benefit from this text as well as university administrators and community service directors involved in service learning at a programmatic and institutional level This book should be marketed to faculty teaching disciplinary service learning classes and service learning pedagogy classes and administrative offices involved in service learning This could be a supplementary text for graduate level pedagogy courses Higher education institutional libraries would benefit from this text as well as the national and state campus compact offices
