

Abstract

It's a little different when you're planning a fly-out in 1998. The company estimates some 30,000 or higher-level executives will attend, and the event is expected to generate $100 million in new business, says the company's chief executive officer, John J. O'Connell. "We're not worried about getting a good turnout," he says. "We're worried about getting a good one."

By 1993, 90 percent of the donated organs received with families spent the money on the family, including medical care, food, gas, clothing, and other necessities. But the program's goal was to help women by teaching them to make their own money. So the program had to be able to pay for itself. The program was able to do this by charging a fee for each organ. The fee was $1,000, and the program was able to pay for itself. The program was able to pay for itself.

And these are a number of ways that you can get the most out of your investment:
