By the second semester, however, Kline was able to identify the cause of the problem. He found that the problem was not the students' lack of understanding of the concept of a function, but rather their lack of understanding of the concept of a limit. He found that the students were not able to understand the concept of a limit because they were not able to understand the concept of a function. He found that the students were not able to understand the concept of a limit because they were not able to understand the concept of a function.

"The fact that the [U.S.] government is not doing more to help the people of the world is a disgrace," said the author of the report, "and it is a disgrace that the people of the world are not doing more to help the people of the world."
