BACKGROUND INFORMATION

The biosphere is the thin layer of land, air and water around the earth's surface that supports life. The abiotic, or non-living, portion of each ecosystem in the biosphere includes the flow of energy, nutrients, water, and gases and the concentrations of organic and inorganic substances in the environment. The biotic, or living, portion includes organisms based on their methods of acquiring energy: the primary producers, largely green plants; the consumers, which include all the animals; and the decomposers, which include the microorganisms that break down the remains of plants and animals into simpler components for recycling in the biosphere.

Ecological pyramids are a graphical representation in the shape of a pyramid to show the feeding relationship of groups of organisms, and the flow of energy or biomass through the different trophic levels in a given ecosystem.

Material Practice and Materiality: Too Long Ignored in Science Education Catherine Milne,Kathryn Scantlebury,2019-04-11 In this book various scholars explore the material in science and science education and its role in scientific practice such as those practices that are key to the curriculum focuses of science education programs in a number of countries As a construct culture can be understood as material and social practice This definition is useful for informing researchers nuanced explorations of the nature of science and inclusive decisions about the practice of science education Sewell 1999 As fields of material social practice and worlds of meaning cultures are contradictory contested and weakly bounded The notion of culture as material social practices leads researchers to accept that material practice is as important as conceptual development social practice However in education and science education there is a tendency to ignore material practice and to focus on social practice with language as the arbiter of such social practice Often material practice such as those associated with scientific instruments and other apparatus is ignored with instruments understood as inscription devices conduits for language rather than sources of material culture in which scientists share material other than words Baird 2004 p 7 when they communicate new knowledge and realities While we do not ignore the role of language in science we agree with Barad 2003 that perhaps language has too much power and with that power there seems a concomitant loss of interest in exploring how matter and machines instruments contribute to both ontology and epistemology in science and science education Resources in Education ,1992-10 Principles of Neonatology E-Book Akhil

Navarro, Victor Yepes,Jose V. Mart, Essential infrastructures such as bridges are designed to provide a long lasting and intergenerational functionality In those cases sustainability becomes of paramount importance when the infrastructure is exposed to aggressive environments which can jeopardise their durability and lead to significant maintenance demands The assessment of sustainability is however often complex and uncertain The present study assesses the sustainability performance of 16 alternative designs of a concrete bridge deck in a coastal environment on the basis of a neutrosophic group analytic hierarchy process AHP The use of neutrosophic logic in the field of multi criteria decision making as a generalisation of the widely used fuzzy logic allows for a proper capture of the vagueness and uncertainties of the judgements emitted by the decision makers TOPSIS technique is then used to aggregate the different sustainability criteria From the results it is derived that only the simultaneous consideration of the economic environmental and social life cycle impacts of a design shall lead to adequate sustainable designs Choices made based on the optimality of a design in only some of the sustainability pillars will lead to erroneous conclusions The use of concrete with silica fume has resulted in a sustainability performance of 46.3% better than conventional concrete designs
