Monroe,2016-03-15 Fifteen years after the end of a protracted civil and regional war Beirut broke out in violence once again forcing residents to contend with many forms of insecurity amid an often violent political and economic landscape Providing a picture of what ordinary life is like for urban dwellers surviving sectarian violence The Insecure City captures the day to day experiences of citizens of Beirut moving through a war torn landscape While living in Beirut Kristin Monroe conducted interviews with a diverse group of residents of the city She found that when people spoke about getting around in Beirut they were also expressing larger concerns about social political and economic life It was not only violence that threatened Beirut's ordinary residents but also class dynamics that made life even more precarious For instance the installation of checkpoints and the rerouting of traffic set up for the security of the elite forced the less fortunate to alter their lives in ways that made them more at risk Similarly the ability to pass through security blockades often had to do with an individual's visible markers of class such as clothing hairstyle and type of car Monroe examines how understandings and practices of spatial mobility in the city reflect social differences and how such experiences led residents to be bitterly critical of their government In The Insecure City Monroe takes urban anthropology in a new and meaningful direction discussing traffic in the Middle East to show that when people move through Beirut they are experiencing the intersection of citizen and state of the more and less privileged and in general the city's politically polarized geography

Educated Out Mara Casey Tieken,2025-05-07 Through the stories of nine rural first generation students and their families Educated Out shows how geography shapes college opportunities from admission to postgraduation options A former third grade teacher in rural Tennessee education researcher Mara Casey Tieken watched as her former students graduated high school She was shocked at how few were heading to college and none were going to elite four year schools These students were representative of a larger national phenomenon In 2021 31 percent of rural adults aged twenty five and older held a postsecondary degree compared to 45 percent of urban adults and rural students are especially unlikely to pursue degrees from private selective schools Why Tieken wondered And what happens to the handful of rural students who do attend elite colleges colleges that may feel worlds away from home Tieken addresses these questions in Educated Out a study that shows how geography shapes rural first generation students access to college their college experiences and their postgraduation plans and opportunities Tieken closely follows a group of nine students for their college years and beyond at an elite New England private school that she calls Hilltop Interviews with these students reveal the critical moments in the students educational careers when their rural origins mattered most when applying to college she shows how students are hindered by limited college counseling resources Once on campus they learn that many of the school s opportunities are not available to them they cannot access spring break trips job networks or low pay but important internships These students discover that home and college are very different worlds with different academic social and political climates and over time they start to question both As they near graduation and navigate a job market in which the highest paying and most prestigious opportunities are located in urban centers they begin to feel the complicated burden of their schooling they ve been educated out Their stories show the costs of college for rural students If they do not pursue higher education they lose the opportunity for social mobility if they do they face a more permanent departure These costs are individual but rural families and communities also suffer they lose young people with talent and skills In addition to advocating for a higher education landscape that truly includes rural students Tieken critiques a system that requires people to leave their rural homes in search of opportunities Our current economy depends on inexpensive rural labor Without meaningful change some students will have to make the impossible decision to leave home and far more will remain there undereducated and overlooked Both engaging and accessible Educated Out presents important and timely questions about rurality identity education and inequality
