Nervous System Review

- The gyon of a neuron conducts nerve impulses away from the cell body, whereas the dendrite conducts nerve impulses toward the cell body. Neurons that conduct messages from a sense organ to the central nervous system are called geogg, or afferent, neurons. Those neurons that conduct an impulse from the CNS to a muscle or gland are called geogg, or efferent, neurons. Muscles or glands, in this case, that respond to a nerve impulse are termed geograp. Neurons within the CNS that transmit impulses between sensory and motor neurons are called interneurous.
- What is a nerve fiber? compared of dendrites and/or arous of neurons.
- Schwann cells in the peripheral nervous system will wrap around an axon and lay down an insulator called appears that gives nerve fibers a white, glistening appearance. Gaps where myelin is not present on the nerve fiber are called acades of Ramies. These gaps allow the speed of nerve impulse conduction, called antimory conduction, to be increased.
- 4. When an axon is not conducting an impulse, the membrane potential is equal to about -65 mV, with the inside of the neuron being negative compared to the outside. This polarity is maintained by the nedion potentian pump in which sodium ions are pumped nettide (outside/inside) the axon, and notativing ions are pumped into the axon. Another name for the nerve impulse is the netion potential which forms when the axon is stimulated. When the nedions gates open, Na+ flow into the axon, causing the action potential to swing up to +40 mV and the membrane to become depolarized. Now the K' gates open, K' flow out (out/into) the axon, and the oscilloscope records a mpolarization.

6. In the above diagram of a spinal reflex arc, a stimulus is received by a mother, such as the skin, which initiates a nerve impulse in the source neuron. This neuron conducts the impulse to the gray matter of the spinal cord. At this site, a second neuron, called the intervenee, conducts the impulse to the motor neuron,
