

CHAPTER 3

UNDERSTANDING THE ISSUES

1. (a)  $\text{Subsidiary Income} = $30,000$
 $\text{Investment in Subsidiary } ($400,000 + $30,000 - $5,000) = $425,000$ .
 (b)  $\text{Subsidiary Income } ($30,000 - $5,000) = $25,000$ .
 $\text{Investment in Subsidiary } ($400,000 + $25,000 - $5,000) = $420,000$ .
 (c)  $\text{Subsidiary Income} = $0$ .
 $\text{Dividend Income} = $5,000$ .
 $\text{Investment in Subsidiary} = $400,000$ .
2. Date alignment means adjusting the investment account to reflect the same date as the subsidiary equity accounts so that their balances reflect the same point in time.
  - (a) Simple equity method—The subsidiary's equity accounts reflect beginning-of-year balances, yet the investment account reflects an end-of-year balance. During the consolidation process, the subsidiary income and the parent's share of the subsidiary's declared dividends are closed to the investment account to return it to its beginning-of-year balance.
  - (b) Sophisticated equity method—The subsidiary's equity accounts reflect beginning-of-year balances, yet the investment account reflects an end-of-year balance. During the consolidation process, the subsidiary income and the parent's share of the subsidiary's declared dividends are closed to the investment account to return it to its beginning-of-year balance.
  - (c) Cost method—The subsidiary's equity accounts reflect beginning-of-year balances, yet the investment account reflects the balance on the date of acquisition. Therefore, the investment account is converted to its simple equity balance at the beginning of the period to create date alignment.
3. The noncontrolling share of consolidated net income is the outside ownership share of the subsidiary's internally generated income as adjusted for amortizations created by fair value adjustments on the acquisition date. The NCI share of consolidated net income has, in the past, been shown as an expense. That is no longer allowed. It is to be shown as a distribution of consolidated net income.

4. The $80,000 excess attributed to the controlling interest means that the patent is adjusted by $100,000 ( $$80,000/80\%$ ).

|                                                                                      |                  |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------------|
| (a) Parent net income for 20X1 .....                                                 | $140,000        |
| Subsidiary net income in 20X1 ( $$60,000 \times \frac{1}{2}$ year) .....            | 30,000           |
| Amortization of excess for 20X1 ( $$100,000 \div 10 \times \frac{1}{2}$ year) ..... | (5,000)          |
| Consolidated net income .....                                                        | $165,000 |

- (b) NCI share of net income =  $\frac{1}{2} \times ($60,000 - $10,000) \times 20\% = $5,000$ .

5. In 20X1, consolidated net income would be reduced by $20,000 as a result of the inventory and equipment. The inventory would increase cost of goods sold by $10,000 ( $$60,000 - $50,000$ ). The equipment would increase depreciation expense by $10,000 [ $($150,000 - $100,000) \div 5$  years]. In 20X2, consolidated net income would be reduced by $10,000 as a result of the equipment. The equipment would increase depreciation expense by $10,000 [ $($150,000 - $100,000) \div 5$  years].
6. The total noncontrolling interest will consist of 20% of the subsidiary's common stock, paid-in capital in excess of par, retained earnings, dividends declared, and internally generated income. The NCI is shown, in total, as a subdivision of equity on the consolidated balance sheet.
7. Consolidated net income could exceed the sum of the separately calculated net incomes of the parent and subsidiary. This would occur if the fair value of the subsidiary's net assets were less than their book value, resulting in a markdown of assets. The amortization of this markdown would decrease expense; therefore, consolidated net income is increased.
