Military Presence in Europe Lloyd J. Matthews,2000 Ten years have elapsed since the fall of the Berlin Wall which served as a fitting symbol for the end of the Cold War That historic juncture brought into question the North Atlantic Treaty Organization which has served Alliance members so well since its founding in 1949 It also brought into question the rationale for America s continued deep involvement in European security affairs With the gradual realization that the Russian menace is essentially dead at least for the next 10 to 15 years and perhaps longer and with NATO s missions having evolved well beyond the original purpose of territorial defense debate on both sides of the Atlantic has begun to intensify concerning the vital issue of where NATO should be headed and America s relation to the Alliance To bring an array of informed voices to the debate four institutions the Office of the Assistant Vice Chief of Staff of the U S Army the Strategic Studies Institute of the U S Army War College the Irving B Harris Graduate School of Public Policy Studies of the University of Chicago and the Program on International Security Policy at the University of Chicago joined hands to sponsor a symposium titled The Future of U S Military Presence in Europe held at the University of Chicago on August 4 1999 The present book is an outgrowth of this symposium It is not designed to set forth a literal record of words and events in the mold of the traditional symposium proceedings but rather is organized as an anthology of individual chapters complemented by selected questions answers and comments by symposium participants and attendees Newsletter University of Michigan Computing Center,1975
