The Cranes are among the most ancient and distinctive families of birds on Earth yet they are among the world's most threatened groups of birds. This Action Plan describes the many different sorts of threats facing cranes especially as they migrate through different countries and the many solutions that have been attempted to overcome them. It is intended for all those involved in crane conservation including conservation biologists, conservation organizations, other non-governmental organizations, international development agencies, political, civic and business leaders, funding agencies and foundations, educators and members of the general public.

The Great Plains were once characterized by vast expanses of grass, complex interdependence among species and dynamic annual changes due to weather, waterways and fire. It is now generally accepted that less than one percent of the original tallgrass prairie remains. Habitat fragmentation, the loss of natural predator-prey associations, changes in species composition and various commercial practices continue to threaten grassland biodiversity. Recently, scholars and conservationists have discussed opportunities for large-scale restoration projects in the Great Plains, but they have provided few details Daniel Licht offers here a bold new approach to restoring and conserving the grassland ecosystem In describing hypothetical reserves he explains how they could help conserve grassland biodiversity reduce federal expenditures on agriculture increase recreational opportunities and sustain rural economies outside the reserves Thomas Register of American Manufacturers ,2003 Vols for 1970 71 includes manufacturers catalogs Nelson's Encyclopaedia ,1907
